while my trousers must only be delicately alluded to, as they were made of what was originally white duck; but as they had been worn six weeks, and had been much in the fields, there was a refreshing tint of a green and clay color about them, which imparted to that portion of my attire quite an agricultural appearance. I carried a small bundle. I will not describe its entire contents, but may mention that it held a red wig and a pair of russet

"Under my arm was a portfolio containing sketches from nature, and some attempts at love-poetry; while on my feet, to perform this distance of seventy-two miles, I wore a pair of dancing-pumps, tied up at the heels with packthread. Thus equipped, I started with my companion from Northampton, and before breakfast we accomplished fifteen miles. When we sat down to rest ourselves under a hedge by the roadside, we felt very much inclined to partake of the meal in question, but were rather puzzled how to provide

"Presently a cow-bey appeared, driving some lazy, zigzag-going cows, and carrying two large tin cans containing skimmed milk. We purchased the contents of one of the cans for a halfpenny; a cottage was close at hand, where we procured a very nice, though rather stale half-quarter home-baked loaf for a penny. The cow-boy sat by us on that road waiting for his can. The cows seemed to regard us with a sleepy look of mingled pity and indifference; while with the bottom crust of that loaf, and three pints of skimmed milk, I enjoyed the roadside breakfast of that summer morning more than I have enjoyed the banquet of this evening. On the first day we walked forty miles, for which my pumps and what they covered suffered some. Our bed for the night was in one of those wayside hostelries called lodgings for travellers, for which accommodation we disbursed twopence. Late in the evening of the next day we completed the remaining thirty-two miles, and found ourselves at the Mother Redeap, Camden Town, with enough in our pockets to procure half a pint of por-

THE SNAKE-CHARMERS.

Among the sights bordering on the marvellous which attracts the traveller's attention in Egypt, beyond even the mysterious proceedings of the Cairene magician who professes to summon the dead to life, may be mentioned the interesting performances of the snake-charmers. These men belong to the order of Riface Dervishes. They profess and convertible at any time thereafter.

The Transfer Books will be closed on SATURDAY. to discover the presence of any venomous snakes which may be concealed in the house. a very common occurrence in the warm climate of Egypt, and, if there be such snakes, to allure them from their hiding-places.

The first measure usually resorted to by the wary spectator is to cause the performers to be thoroughly searched in the court-yard previously to their being introduced into the interior of the house, lest they may have snakes hidden either in the folds of their 'caftans,' or long flowing robes, or in those of their libas, or baggy trousers. Sometimes they are forced to deposit their voluminous garments in some corner of the court yard, and, as an additional precaution, they are made to tuck up the loose sleeves of their kamis, or shirts, after these have been as closely examined as the rest of their clothes.

When all possible precautions have been taken, the snake-charmers are allowed to enter the house. Immediately on admission they assume an air of mystery, strike the walls and floor with a short palm-stick, whistle, make a chuckling noise with the tongue, and spit on the ground, exclaiming, "I adjure ye, be above or below, that ye come forth;" "I adjure ye, by the most great name, if ye be obedient, come forth; and, if ye be disobedient, die! die!" However close may have been the previous search in every corner of the apartment; and in every piece of drapery, furniture and hanging about ten minutes, generally speaking, after these exclamations, a snake is dislodged from one of the projecting cupboards with which most rooms are lined, or drops from the woodwork of the ceiling. The result of any incredulous expression on the part of the spectator, who may imagine the snake to be harmless, is to make the snakecharmer excessively indignant. He generally seizes one of the snakes by the neck. and, after displaying his fangs, tears him to pieces with his teeth, spitting out the bits on the ground with an excited, defiant air. The only solution of this mystery is, that as these dervishes make it a practice to tame snakes, live habitually with them, and are not very cleanly in their habits, their bodies and clothes become deeply impregnated with the pungent oil which collects on the surface of the snake's skin, and thus the latter reptile. being gifted with strong olfactory nerves, is immediately made aware of an odor which appears to indicate the presence of members of his family, and comes forth from his hidingplace to greet them.

BOURBON FOLLY.

At the time of the Emperor Napoleon's exile to the island of Elba, among other small means to which the Bourbon king resorted in order to stay up his tottering throne, was the passage of a stringent law that no picture. statue, statuette, figure, or resemblance of "General Bonaparte," as he was called, should be suffered to remain in any place, public or private, among any residents, native or foreign.

Consequently there was a sudden disappearance of everything of the kind, from the bronze statue on the top of the pillar made from cannon taken at Austerlitz, which statue Louis Philippe had the good sense and discretion to restore, to the mere top or thimblecase bearing Napoleon's profile upon its outline. Every house was to be visited and examined, to see that the order was strictly obeyed, and all offending articles were to be seized

Mr. Wilder, an American residing in Paris, owning a particularly fine and correct bronze statuette of the Emperor, buried it, with other things of the kind, in his cellar. His turn for inspection by the police came. In wached this his counting-room the officer, i

BUCKSTONE'S MARCH TO LONDON. | with his secretary and other attendants, who said in a pompous and semi-contemptnous tone, "Have you any statue, image, or likeness of any kind, of that man?" man?" said Mr. Wilder. "You know, sir, very well who is meant," said the officer, impatiently; "that man—that usurper."
"What man? what usurper?" said Mr. Wilder; am a stranger here." "Why do you keep me? You know whom I mean; that usurper—that Bonaparte, if you will have it," said the officer. "Have you any likeness or representation of him?" "Certainly I said Mr. Wilder; and, turning to a clerk, "Gougain, bring me a bag of Napoleons." Then pouring them out on the desk before him, "Here they are, sir." The police official stared. At first he could make no auswer; but then said, "That money is not what I want. You can keep that." "Go and tell your master," said Mr. Wilder, "that the whole specie currency of the realm must be called in before he can keep from the eyes of the people the features of the Emperor Napoleon." "You are right," said the officer, now leaving, but continuing aside to his comrades," it is ridiculous, truly, this business we are on; but the Bourbons cannot see it."
